

LEWIS CALLS EMERGENCY MEETING OF
UMW POLICY COMMITTEE FOR VERDICT
ON 3RD WARTIME COAL FIELD STRIKE

Denied General Wage Increase for His Union — Few Miners in Alabama and Pennsylvania Reported
"Jumping Gun" on Sunday Truce Deadline—Majority
Await Action by Lewis and Committee.

By Phillips J. Peck
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
WASHINGTON, June 19—Denied a general wage increase for his union, President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers today called an emergency meeting of the UMW policy committee for an 11th hour verdict on whether there will be a third wartime strike in the nation's coal fields tomorrow midnight.

A few miners in Alabama and Pennsylvania were reported to have jumped the gun on the Sunday truce deadline, but the majority were awaiting action by Lewis and his policy committee.

The UMW decision not only holds the key to peace in the war-vital coal fields, but also may rock the national labor front. The fiery labor leader and the 200-man governing body of the union had only two alternatives.

1. To accept the War Labor Board's denial of a pay raise and drop their three-month, strike-ridden battle to obtain more money for the miners to offset higher living costs.

2. To reject the government's ultimatum and permit another walkout to occur when the current strike truce expires tomorrow.

The nation, meanwhile, waited to learn whether President Roosevelt will sign the drastic Smith-Connally anti-strike bill during the day. If the President signs the measure it will take effect immediately, putting its powers to life before the coal strike truce ends. The bill imposes penalties of one year imprisonment, $5,000 fine or both on anyone instigating or encouraging a walkout in Government-operated plants or mines.

If the measure is made law and Lewis should allow another strike in the coal fields he would face the harsh penalties.

Mr. Roosevelt may brush aside the CIO-AFL demands that he veto the bill and sign the legislation in an effort to thwart another coal strike and its attendant threat to war production. The two big labor organizations have threatened to withdraw their members from the WLB in that event.

Such a withdrawal presages the collapse of the board as an arbiter of war-time labor disputes and the spread of labor unrest.

THE WAR AT A GLANCE

By International News Service
The eyes of the Allied Nations were turned abruptly today toward the Far East following announcement that a separate East Asia Command will be established to conduct an offensive against Japan.

Official word that the Allies are engaged in full preparations to come to grips with Nippon was issued as reports reached London that Germany is heavily reinforcing its troops in the Balkans to meet any Allied threat in that area.

39 TAKEN TO HOSPITAL
ALTHOUGH NOT HURT

Rohm & Haas Workers Said
To Have Suffered From Hysteria After Accident

SAFETY DISC "BLOWS"

Thirty-nine persons were taken to a hospital yesterday afternoon as the result of a peculiar accident at the Bristol plant of Rohm and Haas. None of the 39 were injured, none were burned and there was no explosion. No damage was caused to the property. The accident did not result seriously for anyone.

A safety disc in the Lethane building blew out and vapor and gas was exhausted to the outside air through a vent line.

The vapor and gas coming into contact with the moist air outside caused smoke which was carried by the wind through the open windows of three adjacent buildings on the property. Employees in these buildings were attacked by coughing and choking spells and some became excited. They reported to the First Aid Department on the premises and 39 were removed to the Wagner Hospital, "suffering with hysteria."

Those at their employment in the Lethane building continued at their work, there being no confusion and no excitement there, it was said. The work in this building continued as usual, according to a spokesman for the Rohm & Haas Company.

Keep Buying Stamps, Is Message To Children

"Now that school is over and it's time for fun remember your big brother or some member of your family is still fighting for you. So let all Bristol girls and boys continue to buy their war stamps during summer vacation." This is the urgent message of the local committee for sale of U. S. war bonds and stamps.

"Make it a point to visit your U. S. treasury headquarters at McCrory's store, and solemnly pledge that every Friday or Saturday you will get your weekly purchase of war savings stamps.

"Buy each week and fill as many of these books as you can until victory is won.

"Every book filled is a bond."

GLEANED BY SCRIBES

Thirty-six persons, including the faculty of the Sellersville public schools, members of the school board and their wives, paid tribute to Miss Annie M. Cressman, who closes a 45-year period, most of it spent at Sellersville as a teacher.

Miss Cressman heard her profession and her own career lauded for the enrichment of the child.

Speakers at a testimonial dinner in her honor on Monday night pointed to the long years as a public servant. The affair was held in Parkside.

Included among the speakers was Albert C. Rutter, formerly assistant county superintendent of the Bucks County schools. He retired last summer after 50 years in the educational movement. Other speakers were Mrs. Mark Bittle, once a pupil of Miss Cressman; Prof. Lewis N. Snyder, supervising principal of schools in Parkside and Sellersville; Rev. Luther Cressman of Norristown, a nephew of Miss Cressman.

Walter E. Baum, secretary of the school board, was toastmaster. He presented the record of Miss Cressman's term in service.

On behalf of the children of the public schools and members attending the event, Lloyd Weisel, principal of the school, presented a certificate.

OPA Recalls Many B and C Ration Books

Thousands of motorists holding B and C gasoline ration books in the Philadelphia area will be required to return them to their local boards, under a Government order issued yesterday, if they live within "reasonable" walking distance to their work.

The Office of Price Administration ruled yesterday that in the Eastern gasoline shortage area, B and C rations should not be issued to anyone living within 30 or 40 minutes' walking time from their work.

At the same time it ordered local ration boards to recall all supplemental ration books previously issued to holders who live within that distance of their jobs.

The order came in the face of figures given yesterday by an official of the Petroleum Industries' Association showing that in the past week, more petroleum products have come into the Eastern Seaboard than at any time since Pearl Harbor.

A daily average of 1,534,922 barrels of petroleum products came into this area during that period, compared with 1,301,000 the week ending May 29. Of last week's figure, $57,484 barrels were gasoline.

An Improvement!

(By "The Stroller")
The grounds of the Jefferson avenue public school building have certainly been improved by Fred Wallace, the janitor.

Flowers have been planted and grass now covers many of the bare spots which adds much to the attractiveness of the premises.

The grounds of the public school buildings in Bristol have never been very attractive. In fact when visiting other communities and seeing the landscaping of the school grounds, we have wondered just why Bristol's were not kept in a better condition. A start was made sometime ago at the high school building but, no doubt for very good and sufficient reasons, it did not make much progress.

We wonder if more attractive school grounds wouldn't be an education for those attending school and give them the idea that the lawns of their own homes should be beautified and thus improve the appearance of our town.

Just grass, kept mowed and well trimmed, with a few evergreen or bushes, does wonders.

Excellent Collection of Book-Plates at Co. Seat

DOYLESTOWN, June 19—An extensive collection of bookplates, originally used only by private owners of large libraries to identify their books, is to be found in the Bucks County Historical Society's library.

Most of the bookplates in the collection are not dated. The only one in the 1700 to 1800 period which bears a date is one belonging to one Sherlock Willis, which is dated 1756. It bears the warning inscription, "The ungodly borroweth and payeth not again," evidently intended as a broad hint to any of his absentminded friends. Another, which Librarian George MacReynolds says is at least 100 years old, belonged to a Bucks countess, Samuel Preston, and bears the Preston coat of arms.

The collection includes many English and German bookplates as well as American ones. In addition there is one from Lisbon, Portugal. Most of the plates are engraved although there are a great many etchings. Bookplates belonging to Henry C. Mercer and Henry Carey Baird, a Philadelphia lawyer, are to be found in the group.

A fine collection of old book-markers, most of them hand made, is also to be found at the library. Many of these were found in old Bibles and contain Bible verses, or religious inscriptions of some sort. These are done by hand in a type of needlework similar to needlepoint. In addition to this type there are handpainted markers and one hand made of leather.

In the collection is one particularly fine engraving done on silk by C. G. Childs of Philadelphia, which is estimated to be about 100 years old.

As in the case of the bookplates, dates on the markers are conspicuous by their absence. One marker, however, contains the Lord's Prayer. It was printed by J. S. Bryan, a Doylestown printer, and dates around 1840 to 1850.

BUCKS CELEBRITIES

Miss Grace Chandler Tells of Outstanding

PAINTERS, WRITERS

DOYLESTOWN, June 19—In an entertaining manner, Miss Grace Chandler recently presented to an organization here an informative talk on celebrities who make their homes in Bucks County.

She stated that approximately 40 years ago the county was "discovered" by the artists, now both famous and familiar, while the writers have settled in the county within the last five or six years. There are about 150 writers today—novelists, playwrights, essayists, poets, historians, columnists, humorists, and others.

"The Bucks county 'big names' are very big names indeed. Pearl Buck received the Pulitzer prize for the 'Good Earth' in 1932. In 1935 she was awarded the Howells medal, presented every five years for the most distinguished work of American fiction in that period. She won the Nobel award also.

"Pearl Buck is an honest and straightforward person with a keen mind that cuts through the shams and pretenses which most persons love because we are afraid to face facts. Pearl Buck thinks the silliest reason for reading a book is that everyone else is reading it. She thinks the sales figures are a very artificial guide as to whether the book is worth reading or not. Miss Buck spends most of her time in an old Dutch farm house, near Doylestown. She devotes the mornings to writing and the rest of the day to her children. Her neighbors like her and respect her desire to be just one of them, and not a celebrity.

TRAVELING BOARDS TO REGISTER VOTERS

New System Adopted For Registering Bucks County
Voters This Year

SELECT TWO BOARDS

Three traveling boards consisting of two registrars each, during the month of July, will travel throughout Bucks County and register voters. This is a complete change from the method in practice for many years when two registrars from each of the 109 election districts sat in their respective polling places on a specified day.

Three traveling boards, consisting of two registrars each, and known as Boards No. 1, 2 and 3, will sit in the various boroughs and townships in the upper, middle and lower sections of the county, respectively, on designated days from 10 a. m. until 3 p. m. and from 7 p. m. until 10 p. m.

With the exception of Bristol borough and Bristol, Bensalem and Springfield townships, the boards will work individually. In the named districts, Board 2, representing the middle section of the county, will assist Board 3 (lower) and Board 1 (upper), as the case may be.

The registrars will not sit in Doylestown borough and Doylestown township. Electors from these districts must appear at the office of the Registration Commission, in Doylestown, at their convenience any day until Aug. 14, inclusive. A special night registration for Doylestown borough and township electors will be held at the registration office. This has been arranged for Wednesday evening, July 7, from 7 until 9 o'clock.

The traveling schedule, according to the plan will begin July 6, and continue daily, except Saturdays, until July 30. A complete schedule

War Department To Give Up 206 of 434 Hotels Leased

Washington—The War Department announced today that it will give up 206 out of the 434 hotels now being used by the Army air forces, including 109 hotels at Miami, Fla.

The Army, it was said, will start vacating the hotels around the middle of July and complete the moving later in the summer.

The return of these hotels to civilian control will result in a reduction of the Army's annual rental bill by $4,600,000, it was explained.

At Atlantic City, N. J., 35 out of 47 leases are being cancelled now by the Army.

Report Italian Peace Emissaries Arrive in North Africa

London—An unprecedented flood of reports concerning Italian fears of early Allied invasion reached their climax today with an entirely unconfirmed rumor from Algiers that peace emissaries from Italy have arrived at North African headquarters.

A Reuter dispatch from Algiers said that "strong rumors" were current to the effect that Crown Prince Umberto and Field Marshal Pietro Badoglio had gone to North Africa, presumably to find some compromise solution enabling Italian withdrawal from the war.

Reuter said frankly the reports could not be confirmed and there was not the slightest intimation in London they might be true.

Well-informed quarters here recalled that an identical report was circulated at the time of the Roosevelt-Churchill meeting in Casablanca, and was spread again during the Prime Minister's last visit to Algiers. The latter version even hinted the emissaries had seen Mr. Churchill.

Pending some concrete development, London as a whole was not inclined to treat the report with anything but greatest reserve.

The wild flurry of rumor and report prevailing during this entire week continued meanwhile to center on the Middle East and the Balkans, where the Germans were reported heavily reinforcing their units to meet an Allied threat in that area.

A/C William H. Quinn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Quinn, of Tullytown, has entered the Army Air Forces Technical school at Yale University where he will undergo intensive training pointed toward his becoming a technical officer in armament with the rank of second lieutenant. Courses he will take while stationed there will include the principles of chemical warfare materials, electrical armament controls, small arms, explosives and ammunition, bomb racks and tow target equipment and synchronization of aircraft machine gun sights and gun cameras. These courses are continually revised in the light of vital lessons being learned in today's war. After being commissioned, Aviation Cadet Quinn will have command of a crew of enlisted men who have been trained at other Army Air Forces Technical Training Command schools as specialists in armament. With his crew he will be charged with maintaining the guns and bombing equipment of bombing and fighter planes placed in his care.

Pvt. Norman Bruce Tettemer, formerly of Cornwall Heights, who was recently taken into the service, has been sent to the Ordnance Replacement Training Center, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., where he will receive his basic training as an ordnance "fitter."

PLEASURE DRIVING BAN
No Bar To Map Demand

HARRISBURG, June 19—Despite the limitations on motor travel imposed by gas and rubber rationing, there persists a steady demand for the official Pennsylvania road maps published by the State Department of Highways. Secretary John U. Shroyer said today.

A large number of these requests, he explained, come from motorists in many states who look forward to touring Pennsylvania after a United Nations victory has removed restrictions on automobile travel.

"Undoubtedly, the most important service performed by the maps at this time lies in their aid to drivers guiding both the raw and the finished materials of our huge war production over the roads of the state, thus supplementing the contribution made by the Highway system of Pennsylvania to the whole victory effort," Shroyer said.

NEW COMPUTATION ADDS
176 Miles To State's Area

HARRISBURG, June 19—Until a few years ago the size of Pennsylvania was officially given as 45,126 square miles. Now it is officially stated to be 45,302.33 square miles, an increase of about 176 square miles. Neither of these figures include about 891 square miles in Lake Erie.

Dr. Geo. H. Ashley, chief of the Bureau of Topographic and Geological Survey, of the Department of Internal Affairs, said the difference was due to a recalculation of the State's area based on detailed mapping of the State's boundary completed only a few years ago. This mapping was not strictly of the boundary only, but included complete topographic mapping of the area adjacent to the boundary carefully tied into the latitude and longitude.

LOCAL INSTRUCTRESS
CONCLUDES CAREER

Miss Mary A. Wilkinson
Retires at End of 1942-43 Term

WELL KNOWN HERE

Miss Mary A. Wilkinson, a member of Bristol school faculty, who has taught in every public school building in Bristol with but one exception, retired from active service yesterday with the close of the 1942-43 term.

Miss Wilkinson, who has guided hundreds of grade students in their search for knowledge, first taught in a school in a suburb of Burlington, N. J., then coming to Bristol to continue her teaching career she taught at Wood, Washington, Beaver, Jefferson, and Harriman public school buildings, also at the continuation school which was conducted at the mill of William H. Grundy Company for many years. Miss Wilkinson was principal of the Beaver street school for a time, and from 1917 until 1921 was in charge of the continuation school at the Grundy plant, which was operated under supervision of Bristol school district.

During the past term Miss Wilkinson taught grades four and six in Harriman building.

She is a graduate of Bristol high school, and followed summer and evening courses at Temple University, Philadelphia; pursued a continuation course at the university of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia; and also took a summer course in physical education at North American Gymnastic Union at Indianapolis, Ind.

A number of years ago she had as high as 57 students in her room. "I called them my 57 varieties," she commented.

Although she has no definite plans for the future, and with travel more or less restricted, Miss Wilkinson hopes to spend some time this summer at a seaside resort. "I will possibly help with some emergency war work also," she added in speaking of the future.

Yesterday morning at a meeting of the local teachers association, a bouquet of flowers and a U. S. war bond were presented to Miss Wilkinson, and on Tuesday members of the faculty of Harriman elementary grades tendered her a luncheon at Bowen's Restaurant, and presented her with flowers and a friendship pin.

BADGES AND BUTTONS MAKE AN UNUSUAL COLLECTION

DOYLESTOWN, June 19—Among the collections of badges and buttons to be found at the Bucks County Historical Museum is one including political badges from presidential campaigns, the earliest of which dates back to 1828. It is a badge used in the campaign of Henry Clay when he ran against Andrew Jackson.

The most extensive collection of buttons in the lot is from the 1940 campaign. There are 53 Willie buttons and 34 Democratic ones. This compares with only two Republican buttons from the 1936 campaign and almost equally small number of Democratic buttons.

The earlier buttons were of a dapperreotype style. Buttons from the campaign of 1864 in which Lincoln ran against McClellan are earliest of this type to be found in the collection. They were popular, along with the heavier bronze medallions made like coins with raised heads of the candidates upon the face, until about 1892 when the light tin buttons now used came into favor. Heavy metal buttons were still used for some time after that, however.

Perhaps the most original badge of the collection is one made of two pins, a pen and a rose, to represent Penrose, who ran for the Senate in 1908.

Buttons used in the campaign of 1868, when Grant and Colfax ran against Seymour and Blair, and campaign badge of the Grant Club in Newtown used at that time are also to be found in the collection.

Included also are funeral badges and buttons used at the deaths of Lincoln in 1865, Andrew Jackson in 1845, and Zachary Taylor in 1850.

A badge used at the time of Theodore Roosevelt's inauguration in 1905, is the largest of the group, being seven inches long and containing a medallion which is 3 3/4 inches in diameter.

CROYDON, June 19—A baby boy, four months old, whose father is in the U. S. Navy, was suffocated in his crib at the home of his parents here last evening.

The baby, Elwood Raymond Shire, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Shire, pulled a rubber sheet up over his face, despite the fact that his mother had removed all other blankets and covers from the crib as a protection against just such a tragedy as occurred.

The infant's father was expected home on a furlough June 25th. He was anxious to see his offspring which he had not seen since the youngster was about two weeks old. The parent joined the Navy CB's shortly after the child's birth. He is now stationed at Camp Peary, Virginia.

The baby was the only child of the Shires and he and his mother made their home with the maternal grandmother, Mrs. Rutter, Second and Miller avenues.

Early last evening the family was eating supper in a room adjoining the one in which the baby lay in its crib. The infant had appeared sleepy and the mother put him in the crib. She removed all the covers informing her mother she did it as a means of protection against the child pulling them over his face and smothering. The youngster lay on a rubber sheet.

Ten minutes later the mother re-entered the room to give her son a bottle of food. The child lay in the crib with the rubber sheet drawn over his face. He had pulled the

KITCHEN ALLIES OF AXIS

The recent report of the United States Department of Agriculture on crop prospects for this year is hard to swallow, not because of any doubt cast upon the forecast, but because it makes the average man feel that his swallowing of food will be considerably curtailed in the future.

The department said that prospects on June 1 were the lowest for the season in three years in the face of an all-time record demand for food for war and home needs. In interpreting the report, Chester C. Davis, food administrator, made the following statement:

"The meaning of this report to all of us is redoubled effort to produce food on the farm, in Victory gardens, to conserve every scrap of food, to waste nothing."

Farmers may be depended upon to raise all the food they can under the circumstances, but there is the possibility that some city and suburban agriculturists, setting out on their first venture into gardening, might grow discouraged by the lateness of the season and fail to respond to the government's appeal. But there are many garden crops which can be planted late in the season, and it is imperative that every square foot of available soil be cultivated this year.

But it is not only the farmers and Victory gardeners who can help solve the food problem. The woman in the kitchen who wastes food is assisting the Axis, the diner in the restaurant who orders more than he can eat is an ally of Hitler's.

SHOE OUTLOOK

With a total military demand this year of 45,000,000 pairs of shoes, civilians will have less leather for their footwear from now on, it is predicted by I. R. Glass, economist for the Farmers' Council of America. Production of civilian shoes has been totaling 35,000,000 pairs per month. The rate will be slightly under 30,000,000 pairs monthly in the future.

Mr. Glass revealed that the total supply of cattle hides this year may reach 25,500,000, including approximately 19,500,000 from domestic sources and 6,000,000 imported hides. Stocks of raw hides in the United States were reduced last year by 2,700,000 and are now at the lowest level on record.

Probable supplies of calfskins and kips this year will reach 14,800,000 skins he stated, including 12,500,000 from domestic sources and 2,300,000 in imports. This represents little change from the level of supply in 1942.

From the total estimated supply of 25,500,000 cattle hides between 8,000,000 and 9,000,000 will be needed for all military purposes depending on the extent of lend-lease aid furnished by this country. This may leave 16,500,000 hides for all civilian purposes. In 1942 19,000,000 went into civilian production.

A reduction in ration points for brains to two points evidence of the value placed on them in high places.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

Pot Abbott and Costello in a Damon Runyon story and the result is what theatre men call "box office." That this ideal combination is a movie bonanza was demonstrated yesterday at the Grand Theatre where "It Ain't Hay," starring the two comedians, opened for what is expected to be a record engagement.

"It Ain't Hay" is a tremendously funny movie, probably the funniest in the screen careers of Bud and Lou, who recently were crowned the nation's No. 1 box office champions.

BRISTOL THEATRE

Every Paramount star you can think of, and more than that, is in the long heralded musical comedy, "Star Spangled Rhythm," which comes Sunday to the Bristol Theatre.

And by "every Paramount star you can think of," we mean such outstanding favorites as Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Fred MacMurray, Franchot Tone, Ray Milland, Victor Moore, Dorothy Lamour, Paulette Goddard, Vera Zorina, Mary Martin, Dick Powell, Betty Hutton, Eddie Bracken, Veronica Lake, Alan Ladd, Rochester and many, many others.

RITZ THEATRE

Out of the laughter and romance of life, 20th Century-Fox has created a motion picture with a story as pulsating as life itself, played with beguiling skill by a superb cast. Starring Monty Woolley and Ida Lupino, "Life Begins at Eight-Thirty," which opened yesterday at the Ritz Theatre, is rich in humor, though at time tender with tears. On Sunday and Monday, "The Hard Way" is the feature.

HULMEVILLE

On Tuesday evening Mrs. C. Wesley Haefner will be hostess to members of the Peppy Pals Club.

AMERICAN BRED by FRANKEN MELONEY

CHAPTER TWENTY

An hour and fifty minutes later, seven minutes less than he'd ever made before, he nudged his car into the drive at Myles. Johnson was at his side as he swung to the ground. "She's still here," he announced triumphantly.

"Good. What's she been doing?" Johnson grinned. "What ain't she been doing? She's been in and out of everything. There wasn't anything she didn't want to know about, and when I was slow in answering she reminded me that she owned the place. She sure seems to know something—here she comes now. By golly, if she ain't been over the meadows!"

Christopher walked across the lawn toward the paddock gate to meet her halfway. Rowdy raced forward to investigate a stranger and then recognized a friend. She snorted and barked in joyous welcome, while a frown gathered on Ann Rivers' brow. He grinned, knowing that there was nothing so irritating as one's dog's enthusiasm for someone else.

"Here, Rowdy! Come back here!" The command brought the dog to her side, but Rowdy kept looking back at Christopher as if to say, "What's the idea? The last time the three of us were together we had lots of fun, fights and everything."

Christopher laughed. "I feel as if I ought to apologize because the pup likes me. There's nothing you can do about it, really." He held out his hand. "How are you, anyway? I was beginning to despair of ever finding you again."

She ignored the outstretched hand. "That makes us even, because I've been in despair ever since I arrived."

"Despair about what? Isn't everything all right?"

"It's too all right, which is another way of saying that it's all wrong. That's why I waited. We've got to settle things."

"Well, let's go in the house where we can talk comfortably," he suggested. "You look as if you could stand a cup of hot tea or something."

"I don't want a cup of hot tea or something, and if I look that way, it would be more tactful of you if you didn't mention it. Besides, I've got to say can be said right here. But first, I have a few apologies to make before I get really mad."

"You? What have you got to apologize about?"

"I don't like snoopers, and I was a snooper," she informed him bluntly.

He smiled. "That's nothing; some of our best people are snoopers."

"Not the way I snooped. First I pumped your kennel man and Johnson. I even pumped Mrs. Johnson. Then I called up Paul Freund—he wasn't there, he was on his way over here, incidentally—and while I was phoning in the library, I looked at the letter paper on your desk. A lawyer with an office in Wall Street—Tiffany stationery—Harvard, that was your year-book on the shelf—played football—handsome man in your class—also the greatest heart-breaker."

He fussed like a boy. "Say, listen, don't hold that against me; that was just kid stuff."

"And then your sailboat," she continued relentlessly. "The Calypso. The little brass plates on the model told me its name. And there was a picture of that," she pointed toward the car, "taken as it left the shops with its hundred thousand horse-power."

"Four hundred and twenty-five," he corrected.

"Yes, and you let me think it was just a second-hand old rattlertrap," she swept on in mounting fury. "The best you could scrape together."

"That's true," he injected mildly. "It was the best I could scrape together."

She stamped her foot. "Oh, I'm boiling all over again at the way you made me feel!"

"Now look here," he protested. "That's unfair, you know. You jumped to your own conclusions."

"But you knew perfectly well that I thought you were just another edition of Paul Freund—a poor devil trying to make a precarious living out of raising Great Danes. Otherwise, do you think I'd have let you have this place at fifty dollars a month? Why, I've been robbed!"

He burst out laughing, and she had to laugh, too. Then she pulled herself up sharply. For it was an awkward situation. She should not have glanced at the letter that had lain open on her desk. She hadn't told him about that part of her snooping, because she'd been ashamed; but a glance (or two, or three) informed her that his wife was in love with him, and that she had planned to lunch with him at the Colony that day. The words, written in young, forceful hand, had seared into his memory. "I'm looking forward to it, Sweet, as if I'd never been married to you, and I've something important to discuss with you, about the sweepstakes. Don't let anything come up to disappoint me."

"Brenda."

Ann couldn't help wondering whether Johnson's telephone call had interfered. It must have, for Christopher had arrived too early to have accomplished the slow ritual of a Colony luncheon.

"Sorry, darling," he'd probably told Brenda, "the dame that owns the place just blew in at Myles. I'll have to dash up and smooth her down. Where did Brenda fit into this famous scheme, anyway? She didn't seem to have much say in his decisions, one way or another; but she apparently was as much interested in the dogs as he was—one of those undomestic, horsey women, very likely; a little blowy, but attractive to certain types of men. Christopher Wain might well be that type of man. Indeed it was more than probable that he had bought Mad Anthony for her. Yes, from all circumstantial evidence, Brenda and Christopher Wain were an idyllic couple, with that easy attachment that would make them lovers to the rest of the world. . . . These thoughts had raced through Ann's mind with the velocity of incidents in a dream."

After seconds of mutual laughter, she declared, "I'm not joking," and added in a curt voice, "This whole arrangement is most unbusiness-like."

"I know that," he admitted sardoniously. "What I've spent on the place hardly makes up for the rental I ought to be paying."

"Don't be absurd. What I mean is, you have no lease. I could put you out tomorrow, don't you realize that?"

"I realize it. But do you want to?"

She stamped her foot again. "Of course I do. But in all decency, I can't. You practically own the place. Look here," she broke off. "Are you listening to me?"

"No, I was watching Rowdy. Say, that pup's improved, do you know it?"

"Why shouldn't I know it?"

"She's almost as big as Gretel."

"It must hurt you to own up to it." She heard the note of pettiness in her voice and she didn't like it. Her head was throbbing, and her chest had tightened anew in a spasm of pain.

She saw him look at her questioningly. "It's getting raw. Let's get indoors," he urged.

She shook her head. "I'm going home, here, Rowdy!"

"I'll drive you into town."

"You'll do nothing of the sort."

She stalked ahead of him. He caught up with her in two long strides. She felt his hand on her arm. "You're being unreasonable," he chided her. "It isn't as if I didn't love the place; it isn't as if I'd deserted anything—Or have I?" He stood still in dismay. "I say, have I done things to it that you don't like? Is that it?"

"Oh, how wrong you are." Gratitude welled up in her. "You've done a beautiful job! I'll never be able to thank you for what you've done. The meadows especially. When I saw the lime-spreader and the sacks of super-phosphates in the barn, it made me want to get down on my knees—"

"Hey, there—"

"I know. I'm silly about those meadows. I think that freshly ploughed land is—"

"It's holy," he finished gravely.

"Exactly." She felt choked, all at once, with a choking that had nothing to do with the tightness in her chest. Not since her father's death had she spoken this language of the land. It brought back all that Broadfields stood for, all the enduring hopes that had gone into its making. She felt a sudden emptiness in realizing that she was no longer part of it. A new person had come to take over, but it was good that the way of his living and the quality of his being were no violation of its spirit.

"You're going to let me know where you live, aren't you?" he asked her.

"Why not? You must have thought me very childish in trying to elude you."

"I thought that something must have hurt you," he said gently. "I wish I knew what it was."

She could think of no answer to give him. She couldn't say, "I'm hurt because you're married and haven't said so." If she told him that, he'd know the rest of it. He'd know that she was trying, with all the strength that she possessed, to keep from falling in love with him. "Here comes your kennel man," she said instead, as she saw the steady figure approach.

THE CAPITOL WHIRL

A Digest of Things Political Occurring At Harrisburg

By International News Service
HARRISBURG, June 19—(INS).—Gov. Edward Martin has decided not to take a vacation this summer in line with a policy he established many years ago. . . . The last vacation he had was in 1928 when he visited France with a contingent of 25th Division veterans to dedicate soldiers' memorials. . . . The Governor spent more than 10 days visiting the positions of the 55th Brigade which he commanded. The Governor, then a Brigadier General, Maj. Gen. William G. Price, artillery brigade commander of the "Iron Division," and General John J. Pershing joined in the ceremonies, along with French officials headed by General Henri Giraud.

Governor Martin's "vacation" consisted of hiking over the scarred battlefields from south of the Marne to the Vesle River, the Argonne Forest and through the Aire Valley to Montfaucon. . . . The Governor recalls that on one occasion Giraud stopped in the middle of a street and held a half-hour conversation with the Americans while traffic patiently waited. . . . "I guess the people figured that if a French hero wanted to halt traffic for a conversation it was all right with them," the Governor said.

Pennsylvania's anthracite industry will have to accelerate its efforts if it hopes to attain the 65,000,000-ton goal fixed by the Federal Government. . . . Work stoppages have cut deeply into this year's output despite the growing need for more coal for the nation's war industries. . . . Although anthracite production is booming, it has not yet attained the 99,612,000-ton record set in 1917. . . . Last year, miners turned out 59,961,000 tons, according to the U. S. Bureau of Mines, an increase of 3,600,000 tons over 1941. . . . The soft coal goal has been set at 600,000,000 tons for 1943, just a little more than the 580,000,000 tons produced in 1942 and a 66,000,000-ton increase over 1941. . . . The bituminous industry's previous record was 579,385,820 tons mined in 1918.

Battle of the Atlantic

A sinking smokestack, a great air bubble, an empty lifeboat, all that is visible of a torpedoed tanker, all that is evident of the hard work, the savings we put into War Bonds to build this tanker, to load it with 50,000 gallons of high octane gas.

Our money is still safe but the tanker is lost forever. Another and another must be built to take its place.

The men who sail the seas are giving their lives to win the Battle of the Atlantic. We are asked only to lend our money.

Today's Quiet Moment

(By the Rev. James R. Galley)
Pastor

We thank Thee, O Heavenly Father, that thou art the rock upon which we might build lives of usefulness and enduring worth. We thank thee for the foundation which we have in Jesus Christ Thy Son. Open our eyes that we might see that all lives erected upon any other foundation are but as houses built upon the sand—which will crumble and fall when the storms gather, and when time takes its toll. Grant, O God, that we might build on Christ, the solid rock, and thus bring glory to His Name and peace to our own lives. In His Name we pray. Amen.

TO WEDDINGS, FUNERALS - - -
AND FOR ALL OTHER OCCASIONS

The Florists of the country are gladly cooperating in the gasoline emergency which now affects 13 Eastern states, obeying the restrictive motor truck delivery order issued by the Office of Defense Transportation. Anything to help win the war! This order means loss to the Florists of more than half of his motorized equipment.

But It Does NOT Mean That Your Florist
Is Unable To Serve Your Floral Needs

Florists in the affected areas are employing other means of delivering flowers in as fresh and as fine condition as in other times.

FLOWERS BY TELEGRAPH

Flowers are being wired to every part of the country without restrictions and being delivered. However, please place your orders as early as possible to allow for compliance with the Government's war effort.

WAYNE TEST MAY SALVAGE FOOTBALL FOR THIS SEASON

Future of Intercollegiate Football Program Lies In Success of New Method

FORM TWO SQUADS

Amazing How Rapidly Some of The Prospects Learn the Game

By Paul Hennessey
(I. N. S. Sports Writer)

DETROIT, June 19.—The future, or secret, of America's intercollegiate football program next fall lies in methods now in use at Wayne University, where head coach Joe Gembis is sending a squad of 300 gridiron candidates through their drills.

Football at this institution has been made a part of the whole school's physical fitness program, and on this basis Wayne is having astounding and almost unbelievable success.

Other schools this spring were not as fortunate as Wayne. Because of the alarming deficiency of material, Harvard, Creighton, and Duquesne, among others, abandoned football for the duration.

The University of Illinois was forced to cancel its spring drills when 51 initial prospects dwindled to 8. The University of Michigan had the happiest coach in the nation when Fritz Crisler's squad numbered 52.

With the turnout at each school different than the next, no one could predict what would happen. The hardest hit of all Big Ten schools was the University of Iowa, which had already given three coaches to the armed services. Only five men reported for drills on the first day, and 14 days later it sacrificed its duration coach to the army. Today it is the Big Ten question mark.

After looking at what other schools face, it is understandable that Coach Gembis today called himself "the luckiest coach in the business."

When the war department asked universities to step up their physical fitness program Gembis decided that football could be added with good results. The boys were allowed to pick football, and a surprising number did.

The big group is split into squads of 40 to 50 and each is given an hour's workout daily. A vast majority of them never played high school football, and many will be lost next season, but from those who do return Gembis will be able to fashion a smoothly-coordinated team.

"It's just an experiment," Gembis said today, "but it would amaze you how fast some of the kids learn football. The army has said that football and all contact sports are excellent training, and we're proving it."

"When Tom Harrison said his football legs saved his life we had a record turnout the next day. Most of the fellows expect to be in some branch of the service before long and figure that this is giving them a good start."

Wayne teams have always been young. This year the players average 19 years of age. In Gembis' 11-year reign the 1940 team, with an average age of 19 1/2 years, was the oldest he ever coached.

With an enrollment of 9,000, Wayne plays in a small league. Usually the institution plays, as its biggest opponents, the University of Detroit and Michigan State. However, this year Michigan State isn't on their schedule.

With drills scheduled to continue through the end of May, Gembis is plotting next fall's program, satisfied he is doing the best he can both for the boys and the school. Additional proof, if any is needed, that Gembis does all right by the boys, is the fact that to date, after seven weeks of practice, there have been no injuries.

Of course, next fall will offer problems. But Gembis is confident, and hopes that other coaches can find the same confidence, although the overall football picture for next year is not encouraging, particularly in the face of disappointing spring drills. Most of the universities depended on the various service programs until that source of material was taken from them.

The army turned thumbs down on cadets participating in competitive intercollegiate athletics. The navy said its cadets could participate if they could find time. But an abundance of time is something unknown to navy cadets.

So, universities are beginning to realize that they must struggle along on their own power. Their only hope is the type of program used at Wayne.

Not only will the boys benefit more than usual, but schools will not be allowed to fulfill their schedule—something that has been very doubtful to date.

Principal of Sellersville schools, presented Miss Cressman with a painting of a winter scene with a local setting as a token of esteem from the staff and teachers.

The regular classes at the Fanny Chapman Memorial Swimming Pool at Doylestown will open for the 1943 season next Monday morning at 10.30, instructors William E. Wolfe and John Eastburn announced today.

William E. Wolfe, director of athletics at Doylestown high school for a number of years, as well as head instructor at the local pool, is laid up on crutches, as the result of an ankle injury, but he will be able to carry on his swimming classes just the same, together with his associate.

Last year was the most successful in the history of the pool, so far as instruction and classes were concerned.

Instructor Wolfe asked all parents in Doylestown to have their youngsters on hand the first day of the swimming class, for that is the important period.

"Every boy and girl should know how to swim especially if they live in Doylestown," Wolfe said.

With the ban on pleasure driving, there should be more youngsters at the pool this year than ever before, Wolfe contends.

The baby was taken to the Harri-maz Hospital in Bristol but was pronounced dead upon being admitted.

Word was telegraphed to the father by the Red Cross. Deputy coroner J. Alfred Rigby was called and the body was removed to the funeral home of Molden in Bristol.

Relatives and friends are invited to attend the funeral Monday afternoon at two o'clock, from Molden's Funeral Chapel, 133 Otter street, Interment in Bristol Cemetery. Friends may call Sunday evening.

The War at A Glance

were placed under martial law after Mussolini declared them to be operational zones.

No. 10 Downing Street, official residence of Prime Minister Winston Churchill, disclosed that a separate East Asia command will be established in a statement announcing that Field Marshal Sir Archibald P. Wavell has been named Viceroy of India and that he will be succeeded immediately as military commander-in-chief in India by Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck.

The revelation that an East Asia command will be set up presaged an early Allied move to seize the initiative in the Far East. Diplomatic quarters in Washington felt that the United States and Britain are counting on launching a campaign in the autumn to recapture Burma and open the Overland supply route to China.

Washington sources also believed that elaborate plans were nearing completion for a heavy American blow against the Japanese which would prove to be an offensive of major proportions. This contention was supported by intimations of high ranking naval officials that America has spent the past several months strengthening its forces and forward positions for an assault on Japan.

The special announcement from Downing Street, undoubtedly a direct result of talks in Washington last May between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, said:

"It is proposed to relieve the commander in chief in India of conduct of the war against Japan and establish a separate East Asia command."

Further details on the new command were promised shortly. Immediately there was speculation as to who would be named commander in the East Asia theater. Officials remained tight-lipped while observers put forth the names of several possible candidates.

Among those mentioned was Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, field commander for Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and commander of American forces in the China-Burma-India theater. It was recalled that Stilwell was in Washington with Field Marshal Wavell during the recent Roosevelt-Churchill conferences. Wavell returns to civilian life and will be elevated to the peerage.

Others suggested for the post of East Asia commander include Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commander of the British Eighth Army which drove the Axis out of Egypt, across Libya and into Tunisia, because he is offensive minded. Mention also was made of British Gen. Sir Alan Hartley, deputy commander in India, and Lieut. Gen. Noel M. Irwin, another British commander in India.

Direct action against the Japs was maintained meanwhile by Gen.

Douglas MacArthur's airmen, who struck into the occupied Netherlands East Indies for the second successive time to deliver a night blow against the Laha airdrome on the island of Ambolna.

Dive-bombers operating in conjunction with long-range fighters attacked two villages on Selaru Island in the Tenimber group between New Guinea and Australia. Barges and loggers off shore were strafed by the Allied airmen. Targets in New Guinea also were assaulted while a lone bomber sank a Jap power barge off Cape Gloucester, New Britain, and damaged two others.

In Russia the Germans were handed a new reverse in the crucial Orel battle sector when the Red army loosed a strong attack and ousted the Nazis from strategic positions.

The Soviet assault was begun as word was received that the Germans were sending up reinforcements after several futile attempts to regain lost territory.

Exchanges of heavy air blows between German and Russian airmen also were reported. The Soviet air arm concentrated on attacks against Nazi airdromes behind the lines where numerous grounded planes were destroyed. Moscow acknowledged German air attacks against Volkhov, southeast of Leningrad, but said only minor damage was caused.

Lewis Calls Emergency Meeting of UMW Policy For Verdict On Strike

dissent from the board's action of refusing the miners payment for underground travel but joined in a warning to Lewis against another strike.

"We agree with the majority of the board in upholding the necessity for honoring the no-strike pledge by all labor," the group said.

Public and industry WLB members went further to order the miners and operators to sign a contract incorporating a provision for no strikes for the duration of the war.

The WLB's ruling came on the controversial question of payments to the miners for time spent in traveling from the entrance of the mine to their place of work. Lewis originally sought $2.25 a day in portal pay and then offered to compromise on $1.50.

The board rejected the demand as an "indirect wage increase" in violation of the national stabilization policy, allowing the miners only 18 to 25 cents a day additional in increased vacation pay and payment for tools and safety equipment by the mine owners.

Green Leaves of Cabbage Tribe Most Nutritious

The bleached leaves in a tight head of cabbage, as distinct from the green, outer leaves, have only half as much Vitamin A as the same portion of bleached head lettuce, which in turn has one-fourth as much as leaf lettuce.

It does have a good supply of Vitamin B1, but this is less than half that in Brussels sprouts. Travelers to Great Britain bring back reports of how strongly the British rely upon Brussels sprouts; but are they foolish? Brussels sprouts which are like small cabbages but are green, have not only more vitamin B1 but twenty times the vitamin A that cabbage contains.

This points a lesson for the Victory gardener. Instead of cabbage, why not grow the green vegetables which have similar flavor, and get everything in the way of calories and minerals that cabbage supplies, plus precious vitamins?

Besides Brussels sprouts these cabbage cousins include collards and kale. Collards produce leaves which have the appearance of cabbage leaves, with a very slight cabbage flavor; but they are among the richest of all vegetables in vitamins. They are high in favor in the southern states. In the north a spring crop may be grown by starting seed indoors, or sowing it in the garden with the earliest crops, since this plant is perfectly hardy. Market growers in the north cut the first cluster of leaves that forms, while they are small and tender; and this ends the life of the plant.

If this cluster is left and the plant allowed to grow, it will reach several feet in height, and the leaves

Brewster Employees Forming New Club

A group of employees at Brewster Aeronautical Corporation's Johnsville division have formed Aviation Square Club No. 2 and have insured steps to affiliate with the National League of Masonic Clubs.

Membership in the new organization is to be limited to aviation workers only, but will be open to Masons in good standing working at any aviation plant within the State.

Officers elected at the first meeting were Frank Simmons, maintenance department, president; Henry Blankenheim, experimental department, vice president; Lee Mann, experimental department, recording secretary; Frank R. Sciaroni, experimental department, treasurer and Dr. A. C. McCrea, tear-down department, chaplain.

Joe Shapiro is being called the "bike pilot" by fellow workers of the Johnsville division. Joe has been riding his bicycle to and from work in order to co-operate with the OPA's transportation problems. Joe's foreman put the bike to use and has Shapiro carrying small parts from one Brewster hangar to another.
